The present invention relates to a method of enhancing the adsorption of an antigens by a cell which is coated with gold and silicon nanoparticles. Cell-based assays including cell-based assays based on antigen-antibody reactions are well known and a variety of cell-based assays which use beads coated with antigens are also known. Recent advances in immunology have made it possible to detect the presence and quantity of an antigen by using antibodies. However, the currently available methods for detecting antigens are complicated and time consuming. In addition, only discrete amounts of antigens, such as proteins or nucleic acids can be detected. In the case where antigens are present in a small quantity, the antigens need to be increased to a detectable level by using chemical methods. For example, accurate detection of antigens requires a great deal of knowledge about the antigen. Thus, a large number of specific antibodies are required. In addition, the specific antibodies are expensive and time-consuming to produce. Furthermore, the detection of antigens by using antibodies requires a pre-processing step of using a cell lysate. The pre-processing step is done in order to prevent the activity of antibodies from being affected by substances other than antigens which are present in the cell. This pre-processing step is also expensive and time-consuming. Thus, a need exists for a simple and quick method of detecting antigens. The methods and techniques described herein satisfy this need. The present invention provides a method for the detection of an antigen by using a cell which is coated with silicon nanoparticles and gold nanoparticles. The antigen can be detected using a variety of means, such
