EZRA has many features found in more expensive editors such as commercial programs, but it's still good for beginners. Figure 24.1 shows some of the features of the program. **Figure 24-1:** * EZRA includes a variety of tools for editing different image files. Illustrated by Bob Garner When you use EZRA, the lower-left icon button is the menu bar. This icon indicates that you're in the menu mode. At the top of the menu is the Browse icon that opens a window to select an image file. There is also the Load icon, which opens a file dialog box in which you can select a file. An additional Save icon is located at the lower-right corner of the interface, and the same icon that appears in most Windows programs lets you exit the EZRA application. EZRA has a color picker in the bottom-left corner of the interface. You can either choose colors from a palette or choose colors from the image you're editing. You can adjust any color in an image using the controls in the bottom-right corner. The controls are colored by hue, where the red controls adjust the hue, and the blue controls adjust the saturation. (Saturation is a measure of how bright or dark a color is.) Several icons are available in the lower-left corner of the interface. The Paste icon copies the image you have open (or you can use the Copy tool and the Ctrl+C shortcut key to copy the image.) The Fill icon expands the object you're working on. There is also a zoom icon (which indicates that you're using the Zoom tool) and a "watch" icon (which displays a cursor for writing text.) Also on the menu bar is an icon that indicates that you're in the layer mode.

What's New in the?

Are you still hearing the word and seeing the rumors regarding the next Grand Tour in the United States? From the start, I want to guarantee that all of this is rumor and you will find out the truth yourself soon enough. Yes, there are a lot of rumors out there about the 2017 Giro d'Italia and the "possible new" three-week Grand Tour from Trek. I know that people are out there working hard to figure it out but I have not heard anything new. I just will not comment on these at this time. If you have not heard the rumors you will soon enough. For the moment, I just will not comment on it any further. So, in all honesty, can we just get on with the tour? Can we get excited about something else for a change? A Grand Tour winner is expected to be announced this weekend at Paris-Nice. Only two riders have yet to win a Grand Tour: Fabian Cancellara (Switzerland) and Michael Rogers (Australia) but I am not sure who else you are talking about on the US side. I do know one who is waiting and he will be a huge winner with this victory. I am talking about Geraint Thomas of course. He has been competing at this level since the 2013 Tour of Spain and he is a willing and able winner. He has an epic and exciting style and is a tough competitor. He will not hesitate to try to get the yellow jersey if he knows he has a good chance. There is no doubt about it. And how would he look wearing the yellow jersey? I am really confident that he will finally win the Tour of Italy on home soil for the first time in his career. Now that would be a big deal. The fact that Trek is making another Tour of Italy jersey is very telling. It has to be. To me, it seems like they are sending this message to the world, and most importantly to Geraint Thomas. The message is clear. "We are back and there is no doubt we will do something with this jersey as we have done in the past. We know you want a Giro-Tour double. You want the yellow jersey for one tour and we can make it happen." I think this is a very classy move. I have not heard anything else from the team about the tour but it is worth mentioning that Trek seems to be treating this a
