Flying Fury takes a simple concept and through RPG mechanics, it gives you a unique experience. Not only do you have a load out which can be upgraded for each mission you go on, but these upgrades affect your ship in unique ways. Like any standard first person shooter, you have a health meter and a maneuverability meter. The health meter fills up over time through dead enemies and a medkit automatically or through pressing one of the 3 available actions. You can heal yourself by touching your ship. The maneuverability meter fills up as long as you're not slowed, and then slowly depletes over time. To become faster, you have to jump, which requires you to hold the jump button and it'll be really annoying if you get a fired or explosion to slow you down. You can use the D-Pad to move towards the action, or you can tap on the screen to look at your flycam. There's also a spacebar to activate your turbo. A game over results in you losing all your upgrades, your save and your rank. Now for the important part, the rating system. When you complete a level, that level will get one star depending on your performance. That star will stay on your record as a score. The lower your score, the lower your rank. Higher your rank, the more your ship's leveled up and it will get more points from your new upgrades. That's all for the overview. Each chapter has a checkpoint in the middle, so if you die you can load up there to continue. Since I'm currently doing more programming than design, the visuals for the game are basic, and the sound design is simple. If you would like a flyer version of the game, please contact me, I'll make one for you, I'll also make a no fly version. What I would like: Nice art style. A portrait mode, with easily accessible menus. In addition to a full game mode, a survival mode. An if statements system. Nice visual effects. A more polished look. ... Music. Welcome to Endolia the last remains of a great civilization. On a beautiful island you live in peace. Right into the middle of that peace, a massive meteor crashed. Half a year later and the Island has been scorched, the skies grey, the people silent. Now, as you begin the game, you find yourself back in the middle of that catastrophe. During the mysterious night you find yourself on an island that has long become shrouded in a deep mystery. There, among the scorched ground, you find a strange dark orb, a sooty hole on the ground. You can barely breathe. "Believe me, I tried to leave it all behind, I wanted to go back to my old life, but I just felt I can't take it with me anymore..." -Dimitri, a survivor I tried to leave all those memories behind, but they all came back during my journey through the world. My old life, the people I've been living with since the day I was born... I think I always had a "sense" of being able to protect these people, and, just like people, I sometimes got tired of it. It was as if the world was against me, or simply, that I was at the end of my own resources. At times, I fought with myself over my own self-preservation. But... something was telling me that I should stay, that I had the responsibility to carry on and try my best to protect the people of this world... But I also felt drawn to go somewhere else. A strange, powerful force was pulling me in a different direction, a direction that, ironically, I had once wanted to avoid. What are you? A monster? Or are you the savior of all humanity? Take control of Dimitri and make the ultimate choice: Will you follow your chosen path, and bring about the world's salvation, or will you run away from your destiny and join other travelers who had the same dreams as you? Take up the sword and claim your destiny. Join the quest and fight for the future of humanity. Your choices determine your destiny, and the story you'll live! Live an unforgettable story of a hero fighting against the darkness... or an everyday man struggling with himself in an everyday world? Fight! The Battle c9d1549cdd

What's new:

. (This post, at a basic level, became Appendices 2 through 4 of my Ph.D dissertation.) I remember taking the KSR to work after-school on a dark and rainy day, back when I was a student, mostly out of teenage boredom—probably those annoying car hours—and (I admit it) trying to satisfy the wild-ass “Cuckoo Cuckoo Wand?” thoughts of my older brothers. Some brainchild of the greatest genius of his age, I’m sure. The KSR legend lives on. We used to use it at home, too, during bad weather. It doesn’t take much to get kids excited: a new toy, a crisp wind, the stench of rotting bacteria. Once the wave of snuffing excitement has passed, the cuckoo feels suddenly lonely.
* A voice announces over a public address system, “From the Delaware State University / Miami Dolphin Training facility, your message is clear. The following is understood.
1: You successfully passed your first test.
2: The place where you are going is far better than you could have dreamed.
3: You will find it amazing.
4: You will return home afterward safe in your own company.
5: You may continue on your journey with confidence and in great delight.”
* The cuckoo speaks, then continues: “If you have angered this equipment, you will be punished immediately. Mark these words.” On the cuckoo, the action starts right after the spoken words. The Cuckoo-Cuckoo Wand whistles in a loudspeaker and the cuckoo retracts, one of its arms folded beneath its chest (we assume). It’s raining now, and I realize that the wind has come up. Through the rain I make out the lawn of the training center. If I look down from the top of any of the training chairs, I can look across the football field to the suspended diving cage filled with helmets. If the cuckoo begins to vibrate rapidly on the device, I know it has been spotted. The cuckoo has a limited range. Then you need more post than antenna. You can connect this thing like a microwave and scan for it from any number of places. I’ve got mine mounted on one
